

Regional Law Firm — boomerang Complete Multi-Space Office Furniture Installation

Challenge

A full-service law firm with multiple practice areas serves clients across an enormous range of needs — business law, family law, litigation, and everything in between. That diversity shows up in the physical office too. Private offices need to support attorneys doing focused, detail-intensive legal work. Conference rooms need to handle everything from small client consultations to large multi-party negotiations. Huddle rooms need to provide informal, comfortable spaces for internal collaboration and quick client meetings. And the reception and waiting areas need to make the right first impression on clients who often arrive under stressful circumstances.

Nine distinct spaces. One cohesive environment. Every piece selected to reflect 40-plus years of professional excellence without feeling dated or corporate.

A full-service law firm with over 40 years of experience delivering legal solutions across New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and nationwide needed a complete office transformation. Known for their hands-on approach, personalized client attention, and a team of veteran attorneys across multiple practice areas, the firm needed an environment that matched the sophistication and professionalism they bring to every case — across nine distinct spaces under one roof.

They called Boomerang Office Furniture.

Solution

Boomerang Office Furniture furnished the firm across nine spaces — private and executive offices, two huddle rooms, a boardroom, three conference rooms, a breakroom, a reception station, and a waiting area — delivering a modern, contemporary environment combining natural wood finishes, dark accents, and muted upholstery throughout.

Private & Executive Offices

Every private office was built around a comprehensive, ergonomic workstation configuration designed for the sustained, detail-intensive demands of active legal practice. L-shaped height-adjustable desks with returns give each attorney full ergonomic flexibility — sitting or standing throughout demanding full days without interrupting workflow. Curved modesty panels keep the desk front clean and professional during client meetings held within the office.

Storage pedestals provide immediate-access file storage directly within the workstation footprint. Wall-mounted tackboards and shelves keep reference materials, case notes, and frequently accessed documents organized and visible without consuming desk surface area. Storage towers and lockers give attorneys secure, organized storage for sensitive client files and personal items. High-back task chairs provide all-day ergonomic comfort for attorneys who spend long hours at their workstations. Dual monitor arms at every station free up valuable desk surface by elevating screens to the optimal ergonomic position — a detail that reflects genuine understanding of how attorneys actually work.

Huddle Room 1

The first huddle room was designed as a warm, comfortable informal meeting environment — a space where attorneys can meet with clients or colleagues in a setting that deliberately contrasts with the formality of the conference rooms. An ML Park fully upholstered sofa anchors the room with substantial, warm seating. Sled base lounge chairs complete the seating arrangement. A Citi Square coffee table provides a practical shared surface — creating a space that feels more like a comfortable conversation than a formal legal meeting.

Huddle Room 2

The second huddle room takes a different approach — more structured than Huddle Room 1 but still distinctly informal. Sled base lounge chairs provide comfortable individual seating. River Round benches at 36" diameter offer flexible additional seating that can be reconfigured for different group sizes and arrangements. A River Round coffee table completes the space — creating a contemporary, versatile informal meeting environment that gives the firm a genuine alternative to the boardroom for smaller, less formal discussions.

Boardroom

The boardroom is the flagship meeting space — where the firm's most consequential negotiations, multi-party discussions, and high-stakes legal meetings take place. A Kadin conference table at 48"D x 192"W x 29"H — 16 feet of substantial, commanding conference surface — dominates the room with the authority and scale a major law firm's primary meeting environment demands. A Zira Buffet Credenza provides organized storage and surface area for presentations, refreshments, and meeting materials. High-back black conference chairs surround the table — professional, consistent, and scaled appropriately for the length and intensity of boardroom sessions.

Conference Room 1

The first conference room handles the firm's standard client meetings, case strategy sessions, and multi-party consultations. A Kadin conference table at 48"D x 120"W x 29"H — 10 feet — provides generous surface area for the documentation and materials that legal meetings consistently require. A Zira Buffet Credenza mirrors the boardroom's storage and surface configuration. High-back black conference chairs complete the room — maintaining the consistent seating standard across all formal meeting spaces throughout the firm.

Conference Room 2

The second conference room serves smaller client consultations and focused working sessions. A Kadin conference table at 48"D x 96"W x 29"H — 8 feet — creates an intimate but fully professional meeting environment. High-back black conference chairs complete the configuration — consistent with Conference Room 1 and the boardroom, reinforcing a unified professional aesthetic across every formal meeting space in the firm.

Conference Room 3

The third conference room is a purpose-built media and presentation environment — designed specifically for the tech-forward meetings, remote appearances, and multimedia presentations that modern legal practice increasingly demands. A Zira Media Table at 48-60"D x 96"W x 42"H provides a standing-height media surface optimized for presentations and technology-driven meetings. Noetic Stool mesh-back, fabric-seat chairs at the counter-height surface give participants comfortable, appropriate seating for the elevated table configuration — creating a distinctly modern meeting space that sets Conference Room 3 apart from the firm's traditional conference environments.

Breakroom

The breakroom was designed as a genuine respite for a team that operates under significant daily pressure. A café table with rectangular laminate top at counter height — 36"D x 96"W x 35"H — on square plate bases provides a generous, organized dining surface. Marche Counter Stools with open wood backs, vinyl upholstered seats, and four-legged metal frames complete the breakroom with warm, contemporary seating that reflects the firm's natural wood aesthetic while providing the durability a daily-use staff environment demands.

Reception Station

The reception area is where every client relationship begins — and for a firm that emphasizes same-day consultations, personalized attention, and quick response times, the reception environment needed to communicate all of that from the moment someone walks through the door. A Zira Reception Desk in an L-shape configuration — main surface at 36"D x 78"W x 44.7"H with full laminate modesty panel and transaction counter, and return surface at 27"D x 90"W x 30.9"H — creates a substantial, organized, and professional reception command center. A high-back black task chair keeps reception staff comfortable through the full demands of managing a busy, fast-moving legal practice.

Waiting Area

The waiting area gives clients a genuine moment of comfort before their consultations — critical in a firm that handles everything from family law to complex business litigation, where clients often arrive under significant personal stress. Collingwood lounge chairs provide warm, inviting seating that immediately puts clients at ease. Two Corby round occasional tables — one at 24" diameter x 17"H and one at 36" diameter x 13"H — in veneer top and legs complete the waiting area with refined, natural wood accent surfaces that reinforce the firm's contemporary aesthetic throughout.
