Residential Community Property —

Indoor & Outdoor Common Area Furnishing

Challenge

Furnishing a residential community space is fundamentally different from furnishing a corporate office. The people using this space aren't employees with assigned seats — they're residents of every age, background, and ability who need a space that welcomes all of them equally. The furniture needed to be warm enough to feel like a living room, durable enough to survive daily community use, flexible enough to support everything from casual daily relaxation to organized social events and resident meetings, and beautiful enough to make people genuinely proud of where they live.

On top of that, the outdoor patio, private offices, entrance area, and even the laundry facility all needed to reflect the same care and quality — because in a community environment, every space communicates something to every resident who moves through it.

A residential community property needed to create genuine gathering spaces for their residents — both indoors and outdoors — turning underused common areas into places people actually wanted to spend time during the day. Recognizing that social connection and comfortable shared spaces directly impact resident wellbeing and quality of life, the community wanted a common area that reflected that same level of care.
They called Boomerang Office Furniture.

Solution

Boomerang furnished the property across five distinct spaces, selecting commercial-grade furniture that balanced durability, comfort, and genuine warmth throughout every room.

Community Room

Square café-style tables and upholstered dining chairs for resident meals and organized events, modern lounge sofas and matching upholstered chairs for relaxed everyday conversation, and a round coffee table with small wood accent and end tables. Finishing touches including an area rug, potted plants, large framed abstract artworks, and curtains make the space feel genuinely lived-in.

Outdoor Community Patio

Commercial-grade square dining tables with wood-look slat tops seating four each, paired with coordinating chairs, large blue market umbrellas, outdoor cushioned lounge seating, and industrial outdoor trash containers.

Private & Executive Offices

Executive desks, mesh ergonomic task chairs, upholstered guest chairs, and wood-finish lateral file cabinets for organized, professional staff workspaces.

Welcoming Entrance

A sleek black metal console table, potted plants, and framed abstract art creating a deliberate, welcoming first impression.

Community Laundry Facility

Framed abstract artwork transforming a purely functional space into something genuinely human.

Conclusion

By partnering with Boomerang Office Furniture, this residential community created a space that genuinely reflects their mission — safe, welcoming environments where residents feel connected and cared for. Whether it's a residential community, a corporate office, or a public institution, Boomerang Office Furniture designs environments that reflect the mission behind them — proving that the right space can change how people feel about where they live, work, and belong.
